Dr Corvid agony uncle. Bowls problems solved

Dr Corvid will answer your bowls problems on this page but will not enter into any correspondence. All advice is taken at your own risk. Please forward your problems to the editor. We will of course change names and places to void any chance of recognition.

This enquiry was hand delivered by a man in a peaked cap driving a six wheeled Pink Rolls Royce.

Hello Dr Corvid, could you please spare some of your valuable time to consider the plight of an employee of my family. My family live on a remote Island and have not been able to visit any friends or do any of their particularly important work during this awful Covid-19 lockdown. Their concern is for their associate 'Brain'. He is usually involved in developing safety equipment and explaining its operation. According to my family, since lockdown whilst he has had no work to do, he has become totally obsessed with bowling and spends much of his time writing manuals about how he considers the game should be played. He is usually such an outgoing character but has now become noticeably quiet and quite wooden in his interaction with the rest of the family. What can they do to get him to have other interests? Kindest Regards (Lady) Penelope.

Dr Corvid replies,

I have some FAB ideas of activities that should inspire him and take his mind of bowls. I think you should put in place the following five-point plan to stimulate him.

Five: Get him to read some poetry, how about the Aeneid by 'Virgil'

Four: He could take up dancing, how about the gay 'Gordon's

Three: You could send him on a mission to discover the Antarctic like 'Scott'

Two: He could study to become a 'Major' politician like 'John'

One: Or of course you could just tell him he is 'Magnificent' like 'Alan'

Obsessions are 'GO'ne.

And don't forget, this advice comes with 'strings attached'.

Another problem will be tackled in the next edition.
